On November 1, 2023, the Berlin Township Police Department was dispatched to Medina-Roman's home for a domestic violence incident. Medina-Roman allegedly struck her boyfriend, V.M. with the rear bumper of a vehicle while in reverse, causing injuries to his knee. He did tell the police that he did not think she hit him intentionally. When officers attempted to arrest Medina-Roman, she resisted arrest by attempting to pull away from them and then began banging her head into the car. Medina-Roman was arrested and transported to the Camden County jail.

V.M. refused a temporary restraining order (TRO) while at the Berlin Township Police Department. Medina-Roman did apply for a TRO based on the behavior she alleged occurred prior to this arrest.

Medina-Roman was charged with simple assault and resisting arrest. On November 8, 2023, she was released on bail, and her charges were downgraded to disorderly person offenses and returned to municipal court. Her next court date is scheduled for December 14, 2023.
